“ Dear Family,

“A human life is sacred in its grieving, for it is a holy time. Grief touches grief. We are never ready to see a loved one die, no matter how much preparation we have given ourselves. One of the hardest lessons we learn is that those whom we love do leave us.

For this is the meaning of love – we cannot replace each other. In our grieving, we remember the good times and the hard times. All of us have or will take the journey of grief.

It is said grief is the tax we pay for loving. It is a tax worth paying for the joy and the pain of having loved someone so dearly. As long as we risk involvement in the lives of others – building friendships or families or even being touched by the lives of other people – we invite the certainty of grief.

Life means that grief will come in time. Love means that grief will come in time. All that we have would not be beautiful if we did not cherish it enough to feel very deeply when it is lost. So let tears flow, because they are a sign of your love and your grief. But also laugh as you remember the good times, the funny times. Your laughter is a sign of the joy she or he left behind.”

Reverend Margie King Saphier

Don and Judy Dembsey wish to share this with you and hope this brings comfort.
