“ OMG,my dear cousin Cindy ,this is so surreal ,I want to pick up the phone and talk for an hour or meet for dinner,or just coffee and a piece of pie at on of our old favorite places, as you so fondly would call pie oh my, (bakers square) ,We had so many good times ,we laughed ,we cried,and we always knew we only a phone call away,When we would talk on the phone before we would hang up ,you would always say love you girl ,those were the last words you spoke to me last time we talked,God bless you my precious cousin,and until we meet again, LOVE YOU GIRL 💖

“ I am sitting here writing on my Precious Sister’s Tribute Wall, tears running down my face. I am in total and utter disbelief, this cannot be happening. My stomach is churning and my heart is breaking. If there is anything I could do to turn back the hands of time to the evening before Cindy went to the hospital, I would most certainly do it. Anything! This is going to appear very selfish. And it is! I miss my Dear Sister so much already! I will no longer be able to pick up the phone to call (had to Call several times before a pick up) to just talk, or complain, or see how she felt, or reminisce. No more stopping over to the house to visit with my Wonderful Sister, just to stop by! No more complaining to each other about politicians. No more laughing at each others jokes. No more of anything with my Beloved Sister. YES, I’m being selfish. I want my Sister back! This is not fair! After all of the searching she did, going doctor to doctor, only for them to miss what would seem the obvious. I miss my Sister and always will. She has been stolen from me and I selfishly hurt because of it. I have been saving a surprise for her that I wanted to share with her this past summer, at the cottage. But it’s not to be! I already miss hearing my Darling Sister’s closing good byes to me, always ending with “I LOVE YOU, REG”! I know that I will go on, but with such a huge void that will never be filled without Cindy! I know that there will be numbers of compassionate people that will tell me that I will be together again with Cindy when I pass. I’m sorry; I’m selfish and want her here now, not later. "I LOVE YOU TOO"!

You will always be my best buddy!! My partner in crime my coffee buddy my phone buddy my law library buddy.. You are the only one in the world to know my secrets. The best times of my life were spent with you! You are a great mom I know how much you loved your boys and wanted the best for them and I know in my heart they will honor you. I have a big hole in my heart but the memories we shared are forever. You bought me a Lucy & Ethel coffee cup which reads best friends forever. Thank you for all the joy you brought into my life and all the memories. God bless you.
