“ i've known Dennis since the 1960's, he was a good, honest guy, and a good friend. He was a man of many hobbies and interests, and despite declining health in recent years, he managed to stay pretty active. Even during the pandemic, he carried on the best he could, always optimistic of better days ahead. But his health issues were worsening, and proved to be overwhelming. RIP Dennis, you will be missed. My condolences to all his family.

I met Dennis at Michigan State University, where we both played in the chess club. He was good natured and an entertaining conversationalist—oh, the PUNS! He was ALWAYS injecting puns into the conversation! He was a pretty good chess player too. In fact, I saw recently that one of his games, a fine victory over a much higher rated opponent, has been included in a game anthology—an impressive achievement. I offer my sincere condolences to his family and friends. Goodbye, old friend.
