“ There is no easy way to say goodbye to the most special woman in my life and no words will ever do justice to how beautiful and nurturing she was. My mom was also my dad, she raised 5 kids with nothing more than sheer determination and tough nose grit. She didn't work outside of our home but by far had the hardest job I've ever seen anyone bare. She sacraficed everything to make sure we had anything. She babysat for $1 an hour to buy us shoes and clothes for school. We all had our flaws and she recognized none she Loved us all unconditionally and never judged only defended. My mom deserved a way better life than she was dealt and I'm thankful she developed a heartwarming bond with my first born Bentley (6) and was on her way to with my 2nd Bravery(4) . I was honestly a little jealous of the way her eyes lit up when she was with them, made me envious that I didn't cause that but being they are my kids strangely enough I guess I did. I will miss u more than I could ever express and wish I had not taken the time with you here for granted. My heart will never be whole again. My mom was the strongest woman I've ever met. She was a rock. She was stubborn as a bull and believed in her ways. She led a household primarily a single mother and never complained one time and struggle we may we never went without. I'm thankful for the time she had with my kids but heartbroken it was cut so short. Mom I'm sorry I wasn't always a man that could make u proud but endlessly grateful you never made me feel that way. I Love You Mom and will miss u everyday and you have forever left your mark on us all. Rest in Piece beautiful woman if anybody earned that it was you. 🙏❤️
