“Evet and I became very close once I became a member of the family when I married her father in 1985. Evet was a beautiful young woman, funny, loving and very accepting of a new person coming into the family. We were always close, talked on the phone, and she felt confident to ask my advice on different things or share any concerns she had. It mattered to her what I thought, and she heeded any advice I gave her. Evet was such an open and loving person. She loved her family, doted on her children, and had such pride in all they were and are. I thought she practically breathed for her children. She waited on them hand and foot but that made her happy. She kept a perfect house, was great at landscaping, and over time became a really good cook. She loved her role of wife and mother. We were in contact until the last few years at which time her life took a negative turn. She was falling and couldn't seem to accept any lifeline that was always there for her. She lost her way and couldn't come back. Erin was her lifeline. I wanted to be a part of that , but she told Erin she was too ashamed to talk to me. I regret that so much!!! I wouldn't have judged her or blamed her, she wasn't herself and couldn't or wouldn't accept help. I will miss her.... The memory of her will always be constant, may she finally find complete peace.. may her girls always know they were loved. Rest in peace Evet, I love you, Suzanne, YOM.

“ My favorite memory of Evet was the first time we met. Her enthusiasm, beauty and sincere gladness to be meeting, filled the room with brightness. I remember she was on her way to practice dancing for an upcoming music video. It was apparant Evet loved to dance and so here is a poem by M.E.O.:

"The Freedom to Dance"

Freedom is dance.

To be anyone i want,

I am shy,

I am beautiful,

I am new,

I am loud,

I am talented,

I am classic,

to be anyone.

A beautiful privilege

Offered to all but expressed by few.

A dancer knows the true freedom of being your self,

Whom ever that self chooses to be.

“ Evet would take me in as her own child. She was always there for me, she would even hold me and tell me she loved me. Evet was one of the most loving people I ever knew. I remember when I was pregnant and she was trying so hard to make Caleb kick when Nicole and I went over her house lol. She could put a smile on anyone's face. Such a beautiful loving caring woman! And oh yes she could cook great meatloaf!! :D we all love you!! Xoxo always your pj girl <3
