“ Over the past few days, I've been thinking a lot on the many memories of Jerry. There really are just so many, some not so easily put into words, but all made a significant effect in the path of my life and I'm sure every other life he touched.

For those that weren't involved in Beth's martial arts class, you probably don't understand what that class was like, since most classes anywhere else are just run like some aerobics session, where everybody just comes in, and leaves with barely a "hello" to each other. But between Beth and Jerry, the class was run in a way that made it more like a family, and Jerry was the father figure in that family. There was not a single person that went there that didn't come to respect him and look up to him as such.

I remember his voice yelling only slightly above Beth's on the sidelines at the tournaments, and I remember his slight smile when he'd pair me to fight against a certain class's "top fighter," as he already knew I'd be able to put him in his place—and it was only after going home sore and exhausted many nights from him making sure I could. He always very clearly expressed his pride in all the students there as if they were his own kids. He saw the potential in everyone, and he pushed them to reach it, unrelentingly.

“ I often think in life of what it is to be a man. Boys become men through the influence of great Fathers. Well, Jerry Wieczorek was one of the greatest Fathers I have ever had the pleasure to know. I would never dare say that I am a great man or even a great Father but I do know one thing for sure, Jerry taught me the meaning of being a great man. Jerry taught me the meaning of being a great Father in seeing his love and protection for his family. I am saddened in the loss of Jerry but I am blessed, my family is blessed from me having known this great man. It is truly a sad time right now for everyone and my heart and prayers go out to his family but what a remarkable achievement that at this time of sorrow, my thoughts and memories of him bring great joy and laughter in the memories I have with him in my life. Forever I will remember you as this Great Man, Soldier, Father and the greatest inspiration in my life! Thank you also Jerry for providing the greatest, most positive impact in my life. Through you I have Pam and Danny, Beth and A.J. as a part of my life. No matter how time passes by or the distance we find each other, I have always been able to find the greatest comfort and friendship in them and their families as well. God bless you all!

“ I will forever remember you and will be reminded of you often through your wonderful daughter's and grandchildren. It's time to start the next chapter in your book back with Pam and Beth's Mom. Rest in Peace. My heart goes out to family and friends during a very hard time.
