“ Joe and I grew up together in Dresden Village and spent every summer of our elementary school days at Chuckie Cheese while him mom prepared for the next school year, or in his backyard in the swimming pool. I just drove past his parents old house yesterday, and decided to look him up. I never thought I would find this! Rest in Peace Joe. Thanks for some great childhood memories. Both of my parents are up there with you now. I am sure they are looking out for you too!

“ Well buddy...it's going on a week and I still don't have any real answers. You were always bigger than life. Whether we were hanging out on the Boblo Boat on our seventh grade field trip or you were sticking a finger into someone's cheeseburger at the DLS cafeteria asking if they were gonna eat that or scrounging through my spare change in my ashtray looking for enough money to get a bottle of the cheapest and nastiest vodka that we could buy at the party store at GVSU or when you stood up to my wedding (and we had slightly better alcohol) or when you walked in my house unannounced when I was changing a complete dumpster fire of a diaper and you barely paused to think before you jumped in to hand me a diaper wipe...didn't matter...nothing ever phased you.

Know that you are missed here Joe...the world is a little colder and a little darker without your presence. Signum Fiedi
