“ The children of Fred and Lillian Ott were raised in a religious environment. All three were committed to a life time of service to others. Leona, the middle child, was quiet yet cheerfully working within her church as it moved with Christian love through the troubled times of a distressed city of Detroit. She supported the Christian day school by working in the office. She supported the work to create a welcoming integrated congregation. She worked to support positive changes in the ministry of the church. She also used her cooking skills to maintain the weekly lunches at the church to support the congregation through the financially challenged times of reconstruction of a Christian family fellowship. She loved her Savior, her church, her family and her fellow man. She lived and served with love!
