“ My love and prayers are with all of you. Auntie has always held a special place in my heart. When I was just a little girl and I was told that we were going to visit Auntie and Uncle it made me just as happy as if someone had given me a piece of candy or a slice of cake. Of course I also knew that while we were visiting them that they pretty much spoiled us. When Uncle died I felt a piece of me had too and I still to this very day think of him often. Of course we still got to go see Auntie and that always made me so happy. That never stopped, not even after I was grown and married, to Bill, who also thought the world of Auntie, go see her. And once I started having children, even they as young as they were loved it when I said we were going to go see Auntie. When mom called me to say that she had died I was torn because I wouldn't be able to come home because I was leaving on a plane the next morning to go to Washington, because Sandy is having her baby (Aden Lee Garrett) My first grandchild on Friday 03 Apr 09. I am here with her now and a package had just been delivered to her that I had sent the day before I left the house with a few things I know she likes. When she opened the box which was full of goodies, she asked? "Is this a coincidence or what?" I asked what she meant as she pulled a box of blueberry muffins out of the package. She then asked "Did you send these before or after you found out about Auntie?" I told her it was just hours before I found out. I still remember the first time Sandy ever ate a blueberry muffin we had gone to see Auntie and Connie (Lyn) and Auntie had just made fresh from scratch blueberry muffins and offered us some. From that day on Sandy has always loved blueberry muffins and as always she and I both think of Auntie whenever we eat one. Of course her peach cobbler was by far my most favorite. I am comforted though by the fact that I have such warm and loving memories to hold in my heart. I will as I always have keep her in my prayers.##imported-begin##Sandra Lynn Hocking ##imported-end##

“ Bruce

Your mother was so very special to me. I loved her so much. I had a wonderful time in my home at Christmas. She had a great day, she visited with all my family and talked about living in Kentucky. I loved her as if she was my grandma, she will me missed very much. I loved going into work and seeing her smile. She will always be loved and missed.
