“ I remember being at a family gathering at Grandma Metcalfe’s house when I was around ten years old. Grandma announced that we were out of ice cream. Uncle Mike offered to run to the store, and asked if I wanted to go for a ride. I don’t recall what flavor of ice cream we picked up that day, but I do remember how much fun it was riding in that Ford truck with my Uncle Mike. The windows were rolled down, and I was amazed watching him shuffle through the gears of the manual transmission.

A similar experience happened in my 20s when he took me for a torque-filled ride in his red Saleen Mustang. His love for cars was contagious!

Uncle Mike was a fantastic listener, and I never walked away from a conversation with him without learning something new. I’m sad that he’s left us, but I’m sure Heaven is a better place now that he’s there.

Rest in peace, Uncle Mike.
