“ No amount of words will ever be enough. I said this at the service but felt the need to share it here too. Vincent is the greatest person I've ever had the chance to know. I am blessed to have known him, to have felt his love in it's entirety. No one knew him like I did, or like I do. He was brilliant and intuitive. He was open minded, nonjudgmental and loved to learn. He was always full of ideas and he had a way with words. He was loyal and sincere. He had a beautiful soul like no other. He was the love of my life, my soulmate, and my best friend for half our lives. Vinnie was so strong. He'd been struggling with his mental health for his whole life. He put up a hard fight and dealt with an unjustifiable amount of bullshit along the way. I don't agree with all of the choices he's made, but I will never blame him. I understood him. I loved him. I was the best friend I could be for him and he was the same for me. One of his favorite quotes was, "The blood of the covenant is thicker than the water of the womb." Meaning the family you choose is stronger than the one you're born into and Vinnie was my family. If you really knew Vinnie you'd know that he would be at peace now that his struggle is over. He was tired. He endured so much and received so little. He was a jack of all trades, master of none yet still better than anyone at everything he set his mind to. He was creative and funny. He'd laugh at his own jokes and the darker the humor the better. He was compassionate and patient. He sacrificed so much of himself for the sake of others--especially for those who didn't deserve it. He just wanted to be understood and validated. He inspired me to become my best self and I promise to make him proud every day. When it's hard to breathe I hear him quoting the movie Mr. Deeds, "Hard to breathe / Feels like floating..." "So full of love my heart's exploding..." I think of him in all I do. Vinnie I pray that you've found happiness. I pray that you're with your mom again and that you're both pain free. I am so proud of the man you were. I'll miss you Vinnie and I'll love you forever. Be good “ Vinnie and I had a really strong bond when he was living with me. I felt as if he would grow to become someone his family could be proud of. Its extremely sad and unfortunate that Vinnie passed away so soon. My thoughts and prayers go out to Maddie and the Kreft Family. I'm so sorry for your lose. Till next time brother.. Watch over us.
