“ It was good looking through the pictures today. Thinking about your Dad and how he was always there. All the birthdays, BBQ's, Easter, Christmas . . . It's times like these you realize how much people mean to you and how important they are in your life.

It is clear, from all the pictures, your Dad truly cherished his family. I love the one of him giving Karen a bottle. How sweet it is. I can see why someone took that picture. The way he is holding her but right in front of him. Admiring her tiny little self. His face full of contentment. His pride and joy for his first born grandchild shining through. What a precious moment.

I included the picture of him singing Happy Birthday to Eddie because of the ginger bread house on the counter. I don't know if Eddie remembers but I will never forget. You and your mom went to get a new rental car and do some shopping in Las Vegas. So it was just me, Eddie and your Dad at the house waiting for you so we could have dinner. Eddie decided we should put the ginger bread house kit together. I was certain I would be the one doing most of the putting together. Then your Dad kinda surprised me by taking over and being to one to help him assemble it. At first I thought he was just bored. Then watching him I realized what a selfless act of love it was. It was important to Eddie which made it important to your Dad. I don't think your Dad would have ever put a gingerbread house together to pass the time on a Saturday afternoon. Yet, he sat there amazingly patient with our 6 year old son instructing him on how to attach all the pieces and decorate it. I just watched them and all the love they shared that day. When I told your mom she was a little surprised your Dad did that, too.

Which lead me to thinking about him with his grandkids and how good he was with them. I remember when Katlyn was about 4 and full of energy. Your Dad was sitting in his recliner. Katlyn was climbing all over him. He was kinda pushing her away in a fun way. She was laughing and coming back for more and more and more and more and more . . . I was thinking "man, that kid would be getting on my last nerve" but it didn't even bother him. He just played with her until she got tired of it.

I am certain he will be remembered for how deeply he loved his family.##imported-begin##Mary-jo Jeffrey(Ed's wife)##imported-end##
